The program, "From the Story Book Shelf" is produced by Mr. Warren Park and is written and directed by Miss Grace D. Healey and Miss Amy A. Thompson. Directed to the child from four to eight years old, the primary purpose of the series is to acquaint and interest children in the best children's literature. The results of the programs, however, have proved good public relations for

Ike Wins By Slim Margin In Presidential Poll

Dwight D. Eisenhower received 204 of the 383 votes cast in the R.I.C.E. presidential poll sponsored by The Anchor on Wednesday, October 29.

Students favored Ike 183 to 171 for Stevenson; faculty and staff gave the general 21 out of 29 votes. Response to the poll was indicative of the college's interest in political affairs with 72 percent of the student body voting and 63 percent of the faculty and office staff.

Men Prefer Adlai

Registered voters among the student body preferred Eisenhower 34 to 27. The men of the college were the only group to give the Democratic candidate an edge, casting 36 ballots for Stevenson as against 19 for Eisenhower.

The Senior, Junior, and Freshman Classes registered a slight majority for the general, and the Sophomore Class split their 88 votes evenly between the two presidential candidates. The Senior Class gave Ike 25, Stevenson 24; Junior Class, 47 to 44; Freshman Class, 56 to 50; Specials, 11 to 9.

Placement Bureau Issue Studied

The establishment of a Placement Bureau at R.I.C.E. was recommended in the final report of the Placement Bureau Committee to Student Council.

The committee, chaired by Iris Kinoian, Senior, was organized in January, 1952, to make a comparative study of the placement facilities among the teacher colleges in the United States. The reports of 110 teachers colleges are included in the survey findings. No action will be taken until the Council members have had an opportunity to study the report.

Interviewer Finds New R.I.C.E. President To Be Young, Sincere and Capable

by Barbara Murray

When the editor of The Anchor decided that this writer should interview William Clement Gaige, our new president, she probably didn't guess that he would respond with a luncheon invitation to the advisor and yours truly.

As my classmates laughingly chided me afterwards, "Make way for the celebrity". In order to share my experience with the faculty and students, may I present Mr. Gaige as I saw and spoke to him in the Town Room last Wednesday afternoon.

It was 11:58 in the lobby of the Biltmore Hotel and two people, the advisor and an anxious senior, pored over questions to fire at the interviewee, the next leader of R.I.C.E. Their conference was interrupted by a gentleman with football shoulders who looked down from a height of 6 ft. 3 in. and smiled.

My glance ran quickly from the neat blue suit and maroon tie to the ruddy face and clear blue eyes that peered at me. Here was Mr. Gaige, a young and athletic gentleman with a slightly tanned face and a very warm handshake who promptly piloted us into the Town Room for lunch.

As we sat and ordered, all thoughts of food disappeared while questions and answers ricocheted back and forth across the dining table. Anxious to help me with my story, Mr. Gaige would sometimes startle me with a twinkling challenge, "Any more questions, Miss Murray?"

"Well," my thoughts jumped back to the questions I had prepared, "What prompted you to apply for the presidency at R.I.C.E.?"

Without hesitation, he began. "I've always been a public school man and this job presented the opportunity for me to be associated with the training of teachers, an excellent opportunity." Incidentally, Mr. Gaige comes from a line of public school educators. His father, mother, and grandmother were all graduated from normal schools. His grandmother, was Dean of Women in normal schools for 30 years, and his father taught the last 25 years

A Healthy Interest

The response to Wednesday's Anchor-sponsored presidential poll indicates an awareness of, and interest in, political affairs on the R.I.C.E. campus. Approximately three quarters of the student body and two thirds of the faculty and staff placed ballots in the voting box.

This response is perhaps not too surprising in view of the attention the presidential campaign has recently received at Rhode Island College of Education. Classes were dismissed on the occasions of Eisenhower's and Stevenson's visits to Providence, giving students the opportunity to hear the candidate's views on domestic and foreign policy first-hand. As was reported in the last issue of the Anchor, the R. I. national committeewomen of both major parties addressed several classes at R.I.C.E. Other classes have prepared debates on the relative merits of the opposing candidates. Certainly no one has failed to notice, and probably few failed to participate in, the political discussions that are constantly under way in the cafeteria or the smoke-filled rooms of Carroll Club and Sigma Rho.

This interest in political affairs is certainly healthy. In the last election only about one half of the eligible voters in the country bothered to cast their ballot to decide who would lead their country through such critical years. Many of us are as yet ineligible to vote; but for those who can, go to the polls tomorrow. Use the privilege of selecting your leaders. It is a privilege for which many have died, and are dying.

Placement Bureau

The time has nearly arrived when Seniors' lives will be measured out, not in coffee spoons, but in applications, lists of superintendents, and three-cent stamps. The Anchor has long favored the establishment of a placement bureau here at R.I.C.E., an office which make superintendents aware of what the college has to offer.

The report to Student Council by the Placement Bureau Committee contains many favorable recommendations. A placement office staffed by personnel other than that of the college proper — perhaps the Alumni as the report suggests — would offer objective service to both students and superintendents. Compulsory registration for seniors would not exclude voluntary registration by graduates who wish assistance. The office would keep permanent files of those registered, each of which would have a confidential booklet containing information about and the qualification of each candidate for a position.

The Anchor hopes something constructive will be done with the committee's survey and recommendations. R.I.C.E., a one purpose institution, graduates well-informed qualified teachers, but this is not enough, for every teacher needs someone to teach.

Up for Air

Perhaps some of you read the "In Perspective" column in the Providence Journal on September 3, 1952. If you have not, a general idea of it will be sufficient as a preface to this article.

M.L.A., one of the regular contributors to "In Perspective," related an experience that he had with one of the soft-covered books, all of which have come to be known as Pocketbooks. (The name Pocketbooks, as applied to all these works is a misnomer, since Pocketbooks, Inc. happens to be one of the largest publishing companies of this type of book.)

The particular book about which M.L.A. reported was 50 Great Short Stories, one of the better books on the market. Its contributors include Max Beerbohm, Stephen Vincent Benet, and Aldous Huxley. The particular merits of this collection are not to be discussed here, although the collection is an excellent one and should be in everyone's library.

The purpose of this article is to acquaint students with some of the fine literature that is being published at present in soft-covered editions. The two firms which have taken the lead in this literary deluge are Pocketbooks, Inc., the Cardinal edition in particular, and the Giant edition of Bantam Books, Inc.

Included in the list of books that are now on the market are the following: Tess of the D'Urbervilles, by Thomas Hardy; Pride and Prejudice, by Jane Austen; Madame Bovary, by Gustave Flaubert; A Tale of Two Cities, by Charles Dickens; Four Great Tragedies and Four Great Comedies, by Shakespeare; Wuthering Heights, by Emily Bronte; Rebecca, by Daphne du Maurier; The Beautiful and Damned, by F. Scott Fitzgerald. There are also anthologies which contain an outstanding representation of English and American poets.

Many other classics have been published, but the list would exceed the space allotted for this column. The soft-covered novels are a great boon to students, for here is a chance for them to start a library at a minimum cost and, in return, receive a maximum of enjoyment. Look the books over carefully, disregarding the cover illustration, select wisely, and you shall be well rewarded.

Council Comments

by Kathleen Ball

This is a sady story and a brave one. The story of Little Bo-Peep without her sheep brings tears to the eyes — but at R.I.C.E. we have a chairman who lost her committee! Think of the anguish, the counted minutes, of the ears pricked up at each approaching footstep — a real life tragedy. But Council representatives are made of stern stuff. Twenty minutes after the appointed hour, the Chairman of the Council Committee for Revision of the Constitution of the Student Cooperative Association of Rhode Island College of Education decided the committee must have become lost somewhere around "Revision". Accordingly, she moved to recess, seconded the motion, and as Chairman called for the vote on the motion which, strangely enough, no one opposed.

Then going into the highways and byways (library and cafeteria) the stranded chairman rounded up a group of persons who professed sympathy for her plight and promised unofficial aid in the revision.

The Anchor reporter — who knows a drama when she sees one — struggled with the other noble hearts through the blustery, cold night air (while the regular members were probably snug in their beds) to attend a meeting. And such a meeting there never was and never will be again. The unofficial observers argued and compromised among themselves while the committee (in the person of the chairman) solemnly voted on each separate suggestion. The committee, The Anchor should report, was always in perfect harmony — always a unanimous vote.

But the "gods work in strange ways their wonders to perform". The revised constitution in the opinion of The Anchor is a clear, consistent piece of work. The revision which must be voted upon by Council, then by forum, then again by Council, not only clarifies obscure points, but transfers to the student body as a whole some functions formerly handled by the executive board-Student Council. Among new provision is a change in the system of nominations and voting procedure for Association Officers. Nominations will come from the floor of forum. All but two will be eliminated by ballot. These nominees will be candidates for Presidency. As in the past, the candidate with the lesser number of votes will automatically become Vice-President. The revision also provides for interim appointments, clarifies the composition and duties of the finance committee, and defines more specifically the powers and duties of Council. In general elections, training students will be allowed to cast absentee ballots — an item which calls for consideration by all students.

The chairman and her "volunteers" have made a capable and intelligent revision, as the students will affirm if they vote to accept it. To the committee members who neglected to participate, The Anchor sends this reminder, "Many are called, but few are chosen".

Hi,

Boston University's Booster Club has come up with a unique idea for their athletic events. Each student who wishes to enter the student cheering section must buy a pair of small pom-poms in the traditional colors. Thus they serve two purposes. One, the money can be used for the teams and two, they publicize their university.

A mock election of November 4th was held at Trenton, New Jersey State Teachers College. Booths and machines were set up in the auditorium. The evening before the election, supporters of both parties held a joint rally in the gym. Because politicians were greatly interested in the outcome, placards and banners were sent to the students. After 92% had voted, the results were: 396 votes to Adlai's 244. The Republicans also won the Senate seat.

Also from Trenton, New Jersey comes the solving of a great mystery. All knew that the chimes from the tower were heard only in the morning and evening, and on special occasions such as Christmas and Thanksgiving. However, one peaceful night the calm was broken by the ringing of the

Frank Bucci, Champ Capon Raiser, To Attend Chicago 4-H Conference

Attention all students! The "Capon Kid" has done it again; he's won another award and is off again on a pleasure trip, this time to Chicago. And he's staying at the Conrad Hilton Hotel, if you please. Most of you already know the "Capon Kid," but for the few freshmen who may still be uninitiated in matters poultry we'll provide a few details.

The "Kid's" real name is Frank Bucci; he's a member of the Junior English-Social Studies class and is Treasurer of Student Council. We might add, too, that Frank is well versed in the art of being a local celebrity. In June of last year Frank represented Rhode Island at the National 4-H Club Congress in Washington, D. C., and in September at the Eastern States Exposition. "But this trip," says Frank, "is the really big affair."

On November 30, Frank will leave for four wonderful days in Chicago, a trip he earned by winning the state 4-H Poultry Project. "Earned" is really the precise word. Among other things Frank was judged on his poultry flock of 900 capons, his winning of a trophy in January for capon exhibits, his leadership in the Providence County Seniors and Northern Rhode Island Leaders Association, and his teaching of poultry raising throughout the state. A terrific load of activity even for the "Kid".

In looking forward to his trip Frank says, "This is the climax of my eight year's work in the 4-H

Under the direction of Miss Gertrude E. McGunigle, the Rhode Island College of Education Choir participated in a Memorial Service for the late Dr. Lucius A. Whipple at the first meeting of the Rhode Island Institute of Instruction on October 30.

The Choir sang three of Dr. Whipple's favorite songs—"One World", by O'Hara; "Battle Hymn of the Republic", by Wilhousky; and "Without a Song", by Youmans. They were accompanied by Miss Rita V. Bicho.

and I consider myself more than fortunate in being chosen to go". At National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago, Frank will represent 3500 Rhode Island 4-H Club members. "It will be a wonderful opportunity", Frank said seriously, "to meet young people with similar interests from every state in the union as well as the territories and many foreign countries. I think it's a great way to promote fellowship, education and, of course, recreation."

Frank's trip is being sponsored by the Dearborn Farm Independent Company of Illinois, a firm which is furthering interest in agriculture by making a trip such as Frank's the highlight of the 4-H career.

We don't have to tell Frank to enjoy himself; he's been planning on that for weeks.

280 Attend Testimonial In Honor of Dr. Donovan

On Monday evening, October 27, an appreciative gathering of two hundred and eighty attended a testimonial dinner at Johnson's Hummocks in honor of Dr. Fred J. Donovan. The affair was sponsored by the student body, but tickets were offered to members of the college and Barnard faculties and the maintenance department. Dr. Donovan has been acting president of Rhode Island College of Education since the retirement of Dr. Lucius A. Whipple in November 1951.

Maureen Lapan, Vice-President of Student Council, was Mistress of Ceremonies, and she presented Mrs. Donovan with a white orchid on behalf of the committee. David McCarthy, President of the Class of 1955, brought the thanks of the Sophomore Class to Dr. Donovan, praising him for the feeling of friendship which he has towards all students.

Anna Marie Walsh, President of the Class of 1953, cited Dr. Donovan as a model whom we, as future teachers, should strive to imitate. Donald Lyons, President of the Class of 1954, and Chairman of the dinner, presented Dr. Donovan with what he considered "the greatest honor possible", honorary membership in the Junior Class, thereby making him the one hundredth member of the one hundredth graduating class from R.I.C.E.

Ann Votolato, President of Kappa Delta Phi Auxiliary, presented a guest book which was signed by all those present. The book was a gift from the fraternity and auxiliary. John Beverly, President of the fraternity, made Dr. Donovan an honorary member of Kappa Delta Phi.

Sidney Williams, President of Student Council, made the presentation of the gift, an engraved Longines watch. Mr. Williams expressed the feelings of all present when he termed the gift, "friends' tribute to a friend".

Billions Of Buttons Bewilder Bystanders

"Hear this, hear this. So vot's a matta, why don't you listen? This is radio Moscow bringing you the evening news. Has been discovered dot capitalist Americans are creating gigantic citizen army. Every day more and more Americans are being decorated with medals. Even innocent children are walking around with chestsful of medals. Soviet intelligentsia officers have not yet deciphered code, but they (the medals) are saying 'I like Ike' and 'We're for Adlai.' Is no doubt propaganda."

They've got the right idea now, haven't they? It's getting so nowadays when you bump into a person you no longer hear that good old fashioned "Hi", but "I love the sunshine of his smile . . ."

'Tis rumored that the Stevenson camp have put out buttons with built in jokes. Needless to say, the Ike buttons refuse to "yak".

Gallup is planning to poll the population on the number of times that the pins missed the coat and sank into solid ground. Could be a touchy subject.

Seriously though, if any art students have schemed of ways to make a million dollars, these buttons are the answer. All you have to do is . . . Hey! didn't expect me to tell you, did you?

1952 R.I.C.E. SOCCER SQUAD

In Season's Final Soccer Game Bridgewater Beats R.I.C.E.

In the final soccer game of the season R.I.C.E. bowed to Bridgewater 3-1. Bob Coelho, who has played goalie in the past few games, and who had no previous experience with soccer before the 1952 season, played an outstanding game in the nets.

John Ryan blasted the R.I.C.E. goal past the opposing goalie on a beautiful feint from twenty-five feet out on an angle shot in the final period.

R.I.C.E. vs. Keene

Vin Cullen brought the team to its heights on October 18 when his goal gave the Riceans a bitterly contested 1-0 victory over Keene. John Sousa had opened the season by booting R.I.C.E. into a 1-1 tie with Fitchburg in the initial game of the campaign.

The team has bowed to Bridgewater 5-2, Fitchburg 2-0, and Durfee Textile 4-1. Coach Robert of his life in a state teachers college.

From the course of the conversation, I gathered many personal and interesting facts about the man everyone has asked, "What is he like?"

To start from the beginning, as I know he would agree, Mr. Gaige was married to a girl named Farrell, whom he met at Oberlin College. They have three children, a boy of fifteen and twin girls of twelve. Fred, the boy, will attend Hope High School as a sophomore, but Mr. Gaige is not certain where the girls will enter the seventh grade. They plan to live in a furnished apartment on Hope Street in Providence until they can secure their own home.

When Mr. Greene asked in a serious vein, "Has your wife ever worked for you, Mr. Gaige?", he retaliated with a chuckle, "No, but I've worked for her ever since we were married—very pleasant work, too."

What adjustments did he make in transferring from Sunny California to chilly Rhode Island? He bought a new hat, the first one in four years. Mr. Gaige looks upon his return to New England as a homecoming, since he spent several years teaching in Massachusetts. He explained his arrival in town a few days earlier as "A chance to get my feet firmly planted and look around." By talking to the natives at coffee counters and elsewhere, he found that, "Rhode Islanders are a friendly people, and definitely love their state."

In comparing the people of

L. Brown considers the 1952 season fairly successful considering the many handicaps and disadvantages under which the team was working.

The following players secured one goal apiece for the season: John Sousa, John Ryan, Al Silverman, Ed Tartaglia, John Jaroma, and Vin Cullen.

California to New Englanders, he continued, "I come from California and though the people there are conservative, when you make a friend, it's a lasting friendship."

He loves seafood, particularly lobster, and was interested and surprised to learn that the school cafeteria had lobster rolls for 25 cents.

Besides his sense of humor, Mr. Gaige showed a little of what seems to be a man of definite ideas and enthusiasm for educational improvement, but he left such questions unanswered because, "I'll be glad to express my ideas on these matters after I've had a chance to settle down."

This is our new president. I hope this article presents a picture of the man as I found him, warm and sincere, a youthful man with a vital job, and all impressions lead us to believe a good job will be done.

On November 22, Miss Helen O'Mara will wed Herman "Beau" Gimpp in a small informal wedding at St. Brendan's Church, Riverside. She will wear a mauve dress and be assisted by a maid of honor. Miss O'Mara is secretary to Dr. Donovan, and her fiancé is a Korean War veteran. They plan to make their home in Riverside.
